

WSPD

WEAPON OF SINGLE PERSON DESTRUCTION

Dramatic and thought provoking is the best way to describe this thrilling book. From the first chapter to the last, "WSPD" will keep you glued to its pages.

A man (Professor Obidodo) declares himself God and proposes to remake the world. How he does this, becomes of great interest to four foreign governments. This is the story of this physicist and his "Weapon of Single Person Destruction".

Four powerful nations, Britain, China, Russia and the United States all fear God, as Professor Obidodo calls himself. They all want the professor and will go to any length to get him. They even go as far as to pay billions of dollars to an unscrupulous Nigerian general (General Yayisa) to deliver the professor to them. General Yayisa is a greedy man and has many tricks up his sleeve. He formulates a plan to kidnap the professor and turn him over to the highest bidder. How he does this and what perils he encounters make "WSPD" a fast paced adventure. General Yayisa is hunted by terrorists at the same time he is spied on by the Americans. He must watch his back around every corner in fear of his fellow corrupt Nigerian adversaries as well as the Americans, Chinese, Russians and Brits who are watching his every move. From religious teachings we are taught that, "God is everywhere". Remember that when you read "WSPD", it has a thriller of an ending.
